Plan Your Care, Care for your Plan

Health Proxies and More

The sad reality of Covid-19 is that you can drop off a loved one at the hospital door and never see that person alive again. As much as we want to believe that cell phones and Facetime can bring us just as close as being there, it is no substitute for an in-person conversation of delicate issues. What happens between dropping off your loved one and his/her eventual death can be chaotic and gut wrenching, not just for medical staff but also for distant family members who are asked to make life and death decisions for their loved one. Decisions for the dying certainly predated Covid-19 but this pandemic has exacerbated the problem. Much better to plan for the crisis before it happens; but how? That is the subject of a new webinar, Plan Your Care, Care for your Plan – Health Proxies and More.

This webinar is designed for those who believe that one day they might die – and who want to be proactive in the planning of that event. Too many people view death as a one-and-done happening when in actuality for most people it is a discernable process that can be shaped and configured. Like any process that needs to be mastered, it takes forethought, soul searching and action. This webinar is step one.

Even if you have a living will or the kind of advanced directive that is a standard form document and even if you have appointed a health care proxy, your job is only half done. There are so many other issues to be addressed, especially in the age of Covid-19. Tune into the webinar to find out what questions you need to be asking – and you will even find an answer or two.

The webinar is sponsored by Chesapeake Legal Counsel, LLC in Ocean View, DE, and presented by attorney John F. Robbert (admitted to practice in Louisiana, in Maryland, and in Delaware as well as in the United States Tax Court and the U.S. Supreme Court).
